BEAUTIFUL LAKE COCHICHEWICK

Years ago a famous resort of the Historic Red Men.

There are few regions in New England which the wild legends and traditions of the fast-vanishing race of red men have not invested with a peculiar charm. The poetic legends of Whittier have made famous the White Hills of New Hampshire, and the lake region of that state is well, but there are many other localities, equally worthy, which are still unsung, and the legends which remain to remind us of aboriginal days are fast vanishing into forgetfulness.

Such a region is that in the immediate neighborhood of Lake Cochichewick, in North Andover, where, hundreds of years ago, the noble race of red men built their graceful wigwams and lighted their council fires. There they watched the golden maize ripen in the fertile meadows under the influence of the September sun, and pursued the bounding deer through the dense forests. Lake Cochichewick was then, as now, one of the most beautiful sheets of water in all this region, and its waters were as clear and cool as a shower of pearls.

The same conditions exist now. No polluted streams flow into it, but it is fed by springs in the bottom of the lake, which make its waters absolutely pure, and always cold and clear. Its shores are covered with small, smooth pebbles, and upon adjacent hillsides forests of oak and evergreen still remain.

At the lower end of the lake three large ice houses have been erected and filled with ice from this clear body of water. Six thousand tons have been housed here by EDWARD ADAMS, who is prepared to furnish ice of absolute purity to his customers. It is vastly different from the ordinary ice sold in New England, and it can be obtained by leaving your order at the store of VALPEY BROTHERS, Andover.

Strictly Pure Ice!

Citizens of Andover desiring a strictly pure article of ice should see that their supply comes from Pompe pond. As pure a sheet of water as there is in Massachusetts, surrounded by hill and wood. Fed entirely by springs, there is no chance for impurities, not even locomotive cinders. It is of as much historic interest as her larger sister in connection with the Red Men or the Black, and is not behind in sentimentality, and it is ahead in purity.

I secured two thousand tons of ice from its surface the past winter, and am prepared to furnish persons with it at reasonable rates in quantities to suit. Orders left with REA & ABBOTT will receive prompt attention.

(1) The homestead of this Ebenezer Stiles (son of Robert of Boxford) although at that time in the North Parish of Andover is now, by the change of boundary, in Middleton—being the last house in that town towards Andover. So says Ebenezer's great-grandson, Dea. David Stiles of Middleton. The house is still in the Stiles family.

OF PUBLIC INTEREST.

The Ice-Pitcher.

A notable article in the North American Review is cited and commented upon by the Christian Union:

There are certain subjects that it seems useless to discuss. For discussion by the best informed and ablest does not change the popular disposition to exercise its own free will untrammelled by knowledge. Tight lacing, the wearing of high-heeled, narrow, pointed-toed shoes, the excessive use of condiments, the use of tobacco, spirituous liquors, and ice-water, are among the evils that call out the best special knowledge of our time; yet there are ever present evils, exciting the worst fears of the scientist and the indignation of the wise at the folly of the foolish. The case against "The Mischievous Ice-Pitcher," by Dr. William E. Hammond, is strong enough to arouse the fears of the most indifferent. Dr. Hammond states that there is more ice-water drunk in the United States than in all the rest of the world; that ice-water is an American invention that has invaded England and Ireland, to their great detriment. He also states a fact that does not receive the serious attention it should receive, that the drinking of ice-water is an acquired taste. Infants and savages manifest pain when they first attempt to drink ice-water. Dr. Hammond speaks with an authority which none can question, and his opinion will carry weight with all thinking people. The train of evils, one might almost say disasters, following the drinking of ice-water is appalling. Dr. Hammond says: "In the first place, it may cause sudden death, especially if indulged in when the body is overheated. A very important part of the nervous system, called the solar plexus, is situated immediately behind the stomach. A severe blow inflicted on the body just over this part of the sympathetic system of nerves will cause death with as great rapidity as will a stab in the heart. Many a so-called man has killed his wife by kicking her in the stomach. It is not the injury to the organ of digestion that produces instantaneous death, but the shock which is given to the solar plexus, and through it to the heart. A big drink of ice-water reduces the temperature of the solar plexus so suddenly that the action of the heart is greatly lessened; sometimes to so great an extent as to cause instant death. It is quite common for persons to feel faint and to become pale immediately after drinking a glass of ice-water. They attribute these effects to heat or over-exertion, or to some other cause which has nothing to do with the result, not knowing that they have so weakened the heart as to prevent its sending a due amount of blood to the lungs and brain, and that, had the water been a little colder, life would possibly have been extinguished altogether. Direct experiments with instruments especially devised for the purpose of measuring the force of the heart's pulsations establish the fact that there is no agent of the materia medica more powerful with some persons as a depressant of this organ than a large draught of ice-water. Under certain circumstances it acts with all the force and rapidity of prussic acid."

Neuralgia is an acknowledged American ailment. Dr. Hammond attributes this disease in a measure to the extravagant use of ice-water, of ice-cold drinks. A further danger attending the use of ice-cold drinks is the destruction of the teeth; it cracks the enamel, which causes the teeth to decay. Its effects on the digestive organs are most serious, and to it Dr. Hammond traces many diseases of the stomach. He says: "As soon as the cold liquid reaches this organ, the blood-vessels which are enlarged during the process of digestion, in order that a due amount of gastric juice may be secreted, are at once contracted, and the function is accordingly more or less completely arrested. Confirmed dyspepsia is a necessary consequence, and this frequently assumes the form of gastric catarrh, than which disorders are more intractable. Nor does the morbid action cease here. Many a case of obstinate diarrhoea owes its origin to the refrigeration of the sympathetic ganglia of the abdomen induced by ice-water. There is some reason to believe that cancer of the stomach, a disease certainly more frequent among Americans than other people, is likewise one of its consequences."

Dr. Hammond goes on to say that, while he is not prepared to support the views of some medical writers that the use of ice-water is one source of Bright's disease of the kidneys, he considers it quite possible that such may be a fact. "Judging by analogy, and by what we know of the effects of ice-water on other internal organs; I see no reason to doubt that the kidneys may also be brought under its morbid influences. So long as there is a reasonable doubt upon the subject, it would seem to be prudent for those who are predisposed to kidney disease to drink water considerably above the temperature of thirty-two degrees."

In closing, Dr. Hammond says that drinking-water should never be below fifty degrees, and this is easily obtainable by running the water through a faucet for two minutes, or drawing from any country well. He is inclined to think that if the use of ice-water were generally discarded people would live to a greater age.

One of the least pernicious effects of ice-water when taken at the table is the deadening of the sense of taste. As a proof, Dr. Hammond states that to reduce the disagreeableness of certain kinds of medicine to the palate, the patient is recommended to hold a piece of ice in his mouth for a few minutes before taking the dose. When one realizes the keen enjoyment of a palate sensitive to that which gratifies it, it seems worse than foolishness to do that which destroys this pleasure, and involves the dangers of disease and death.

Across the Continent.

Dr. Dunning, the new editor-elect of the Congregationalist gives in that journal his impressions of a long trip over the country, from which we take a few paragraphs:

Within three months I have journeyed over thirteen thousand miles, through thirty-three States and Territories. The trip included the Atlantic coast from Massachusetts to Florida, and the Pacific from Southern California to Northern Washington. I crossed the continent through Colorado and Utah, returning through Montana, Dakota, and Minnesota.

Greater prosperity is before our country than it has yet known. Our resources are practically inexhaustible, and within the present decade their extent has been disclosed far more rapidly than ever before. The culture of small fruits in Georgia is breaking up the great plantations into profitable small farms. Iron ore dug out of the hills is making Alabama into a new state, with towns springing up quickly as in the West. Coal is soon to be delivered in San Francisco at one half the cost of five years ago. I saw large quantities of petroleum brought out of the forests ready for shipment on Puget Sound. Great flour mills are being constructed at Spokane Falls, with a water power as fine as that at Minneapolis, in the midst of the finest wheat-growing region in the world. Summer resorts are springing up along the coasts of Oregon and Washington, and among the lakes of Northern Idaho, like those in New England. Everywhere there is a spirit of enterprise, which signifies that these things are only the first steps in new discoveries. I was only twice approached by dead beats during the whole journey, and one of these was a negro. The man in good health who cannot get a living in this country, should be provided for either in a jail or an asylum for idiots. The rapid means of communication is making the wealth of one part constantly more available in every other. Large promises of gain give great stimulus to skilled labor. The combination of all nationalities gives to all enterprises the benefits of the most varied experiences. Peaceful relations with all nations allow men to turn with intense interest to industrial problems.

Great changes are taking place in the attitude of political parties. In the South the race problem is being crowded aside by problems of immigration, taxes, transportation of goods, and the relations between manufacture and agriculture. In the West the political interest in temperance, woman's suffrage and kindred matters, appears to be on the wane. Less attention is given to principles in political discussions than to gaining immediate and temporal benefits. The contest is hotter over the question which town shall be the capital of the new State, than over planks in the constitution to secure the purity of the ballot or the sanctity of homes. Yet, in face of realized dangers, I believe the American people were never more worthy to be trusted than now.

Barrel-Stave Hammock.

Here is a recipe for a cheap hammock for you, children. Any bright boy can make it himself, having only to buy the rope. (A piece of his mother's clothes-line will not answer the purpose!) We and our children tried it a few years ago, and it worked admirably:

The principal materials are four pieces of rope about four or five yards long and some strong barrel staves about three or four inches wide. Bore a half inch hole in the centre of each end half an inch back from the chine. Then, commencing with one side, weave the two ropes through the holes and under and above the staves in an alternate manner so that the staves will be firmly held in place. For example, commence by passing the first rope over the stave end down through the hole and under that part beyond the hole, then over the next half down through the second hole, and so on. The second rope run the reverse of this, beginning at the same end, will bind the whole firmly together. The stave portion of the hammock should not be over six or seven feet long. When the ropes are all in place secure the four ends firmly and evenly to an iron ring, adjusting them at both ends so that the strain will not come upon one piece more than another. Use quarter inch manilla rope.

EVERY HOUSEKEEPER SHOULD USE

Glen Mills Breadstuffs.

Among their specialties are

made from the very best pure yellow corn, thoroughly cleansed, ground and baked by a process peculiar to this mill. It distances all other boiled meals in the market in sweetness and flavor.

ENTIRE WHEAT FLOUR

is made from selected, choice, ripe wheat, the grain first having been thoroughly cleansed, scoured and brushed, the woody fibre discarded, the inner brand retained, and the whole reduced to a uniform fineness by a process peculiar to our own mills. Every effort of the mind or movement of the muscle involves the waste of nervous energy and vitality; we must build up our systems by those elements which will replace those wastes. Chemical analysis shows us that waste flour cannot do this, as the best part of the wheat is sacrificed for the sake of the color.

GLEN MILLS ENTIRE WHEAT FLOUR

contains all the elements of the wheat, stored there by our Creator for our use.

Those preferring a coarse Graham should use the

Glen Mills True Wheat Meal

the best wheat meal in the market.

GLEN MILLS NEW PROCESS RYE MEAL,

Is made from the best quality of White Rye, which before it comes from the mills is thoroughly cleansed from all impurities, so that nothing comes to the reducing mills but plump, sound rye, as clean as washing can make it. One five pound package of our rye meal will convince you of its merits.

WHITE CORN MEAL,

CRACKED WHEAT, YELLOW HOMINY, RYE WHEAT, GRANULATED WHEAT.

are among our other goods.

See that the name GLEN MILLS is on every package. For sale in five pound packages, barrels and half-barrels.

SUNDAY NEWS AND NOTES.	7

It is a matter of congratulation to our citizens that the Commissioners have found prices and time on the supplies for the New Water Works to be such that they are enabled to go on with the work, without further delay. And it is further a matter of congratulation that they have secured an engineer whose policy seems to be to push things. The waterworks have reached their present standing after many years of discussion and contention, and the fact that they are now to be put through before snow flies, makes them at last, an assured part of Andover's conveniences.

Before they shall have been completed there is sure to be the same complaints and growling, only in a larger measure, as have followed the placing of the electric light poles. The streets will be torn up, and grass banks and borders beside the road are sure to suffer; but we are glad to note in the specifications under which the Contractor will work that the engineer has placed the requirements very strong for the putting back into their present condition. No public convenience has ever been introduced without public inconvenience for a time, but we believe we can see in the unsightly telephone and electric poles, and in the prospective town streets, the foundation of a new era of prosperity for Andover. Already there are whisperings of new industries on the new railroad street and they are sure to come with the introduction of water, electricity and kindred luxuries, that soon will become necessities. Let us hail gladly the forward steps that are to make Andover more than ever, a model home town.

For a number of summers, Mr. B. Frank Smith has been in the habit of entertaining the Band at his grove and summer home at Haggett's Pond. So again, on Monday night in response to his cordial invitation the members of the Band were conveyed to the Pond in Bean's barge "Independence." The weather was very pleasant at the time of starting, but during the evening rain fell quite heavily, somewhat marring the pleasantness of the occasion. The grove was prettily illuminated with Chinese lanterns, and these together with the display of fireworks gave forth a very handsome appearance. The evening was passed in dancing, music, and in discussing a generous spread furnished by Mr. Smith. A splendid time was the unanimous opinion of the Band boys on their return home.

Mrs. Sarah J. Downing, wife of the late J. J. Downing, has the sympathy of the community in the loss of her youngest son, Richard Paul, who died Sunday at the age of four months and ten days, after a three days sickness. The remains were taken to Everett for burial, Wednesday.

Edward Butterworth of North Andover, instructor in the public schools, will teach music at Punchard next year, and not J. A. Baker as was reported.

The 3.40 Manchester express Tuesday afternoon, struck a dog belonging to Prof. Tucker, just below the flag-house, injuring him sufficiently to necessitate shooting.

The Andover Water Works.

The Water Commissioners, together with Engineer Blake are pushing forward the business as rapidly as possible. On Monday, proposals were opened for the pipe and special castings, four being received. After examination the contract for furnishing the above was awarded to the Camden Iron Works of Philadelphia. The pipe will be 12, 10, 8, 6, and 4 inches in size, and the first lot is to be delivered by Sept. 1, and the whole by Dec. 1. The pumping station for the works will probably be located this side of Haggett's Pond near Bailey's Grove. The commissioners say there are fair prospects of the system being completed by Christmas. The commissioners went to Hyde Park, Tuesday, and with Engineer Blake visited the water works at that place, Norwood and Dedham.

On Thursday, the 25th, occurred the marriage of Mr. Warren L. Johnson of this town and Miss Mattie Crockett of Westville, Nova Scotia, at the latter place. The ceremony was performed at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, a reception being held in the evening, after which they went to Halifax for two weeks. Both are well-known here, Mr. Johnson having spent a number of years in town. Their many friends will wish them success in their married life. Their home for the present at least will be at Westville at the home of her parents.

Mr. John E. Holt who has been learning the creamery business, has been visiting home preparatory to going to New Haven, Conn., where he is to take charge of a large stock farm.

Mrs. Phoebe Chandler Trow who passed from service here on July 26th 1889, was born in Greenfield, N. H. July 30th 1826. Her maiden name was Grant and her mother of Andover origin. She came to Andover to live at the age of 9, and was married to Daniel Trow of the West Parish, May 4th 1848. In the death of Mrs. Trow the West church and Parish is called to mourn the loss of a highly esteemed and deeply loved servant of Christ, whose sympathy and service were ever at the call of any whose need made them her neighbors.

In her home life she faithfully and completely filled the place of wife and mother. The image of her cheerful and uncommonly attractive face in which her Christian character was so evidently mirrored, forms a picture which will not easily fade from the hearts of those who knew her while the memory of that life which like her Master's sought not to be ministered unto but to minister, must be to her many friends an incentive to more faithful service.

Smith & Dove Picnic.

The annual excursion of the employees of the Smith & Dove Mfg Co. was held at Canobie Lake last Saturday in anything but picnic weather. When the train left the depot at 8.10, rain was falling quite heavily and continued to drizzle the whole day. At Frye Village and So. Lawrence quite a number boarded the train, making the total excursionists about 300. The grove was reached at 9.30, and people began to look for dry quarters, the dancing hall and skating rink attracting large numbers. The Andover Brass Band played several stirring selections while the contestants prepared for the races. The boat race came first, followed in order by the swimming, three-legged and sack races. The result was as follows: boat race, doubles, J. C. Low and Wm. Gow; swimming race, Lyall H. Coulie; three-legged race, A. Saunders and Stewart Bell; sack race, C. Bell. After the racing, Aunt Sally, an old game, was assailed with quite a storm of wooden pins, lucky ones breaking two pipes, placed in her mouth, receiving a cigar.

Dancing next occupied the attention of the older ones, which was kept up until leaving time with several short intermissions. During the intermissions after dinner, Mr. Jos. W. Smith gave a very happy address in Scotch, which was received with loud applause. A short programme was then gone through, with songs by Messrs. J. C. Low and John Smith, a hornpipe by J. Harris, and a recitation entitled "Reminiscences of the Indian Mutiny," excellently rendered by James P. Peattie. After selections by the band, dancing was again resumed with much spirit. Seven o'clock was the scheduled time to leave, but the conductor of the train arrived and said the train would leave at 4.30 if desired, and all agreed. Andover was reached at 5.10, all having had a good time despite the wet, disagreeable weather. The arrangements were carried out perfectly, reflecting great credit on the management.

Roark of Lowell, a horse cart with extra wide wheels for use on reclaimed land.

The two canoes which left here last Thursday morning on a cruise arrived home all right. They sailed the Shawahin to Billerica, then took the Concord River to Lowell, down the Merrimac and up the Shawshin to the port of Frye Village which they reached in a heavy rain about 10.30 A. Edward Wright of Lawrence, the well known stable keeper, left a horse and buggy standing on Chester St. while he called on a friend; when he came out the horse was gone. A large party attended the Methodist Camp meeting at Wilmington last week.

The subject has been broached of taking the old "Shawheen" hand-tub to Providence to the grand muster of hand engines to be held in early September, but there is some doubt as to whether a company large enough could be got together to go. There is no doubt but what we could get up fine looking body of men as could be found, though they do not have quite so much fire practice as some city companies.

The bride wore a long veil surmounted with a cluster of bride's roses, and the costume was of fine muslin adorned with ribbons of white satin. Miss Isabella B. Porter, a sister of the groom, was the chosen maid of honor and was attired in a cream colored gown with blue trimmings. Mr. A. M. Stott of Lawrence acted as groomsmen. The altar of the church was beautifully decorated with flowering plants. After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Porter repaired to Odd Fellow's Hall in town, where from 9 o'clock until 4, a joyous reception was held. A bounteous wedding feast was served, in an agreeable manner, by Miss Porter, in the banquet hall at the commencement of the festivities; each guest was also served with a piece of the "bride's cake." Dancing, singing, and other entertainment was furnished until early morning when the happy gathering dispersed, the Lawrence friends returning in special horse-cars provided for the occasion. Electricity vs. Horses.

The whole running expenses of electric cars are one-third less than the expenses of horse cars. Besides, the nuisance of large stables is dispensed with, and there is no need of storage for hay and grain. Cars need less space of track, and the pavement is not broken up by the incessant tramp of horses. But the point of perhaps most importance to the general public is the decrease of noise. With rubber pavements, the use of electric cars, the abolition of the steam whistle in city limits, the suppression of bell ringing in church towns and the restriction of hucksters' cries in the city it becomes far more inhabitable for well people and less intolerable for the sick.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Mr. Frank B. Sanborn states that the reasons for closing the Concord School of Philosophy were partly of sentiment, on account of the death of several of the original lecturers and the scattering of others, and partly of convenience. He adds that the lectures "may be resumed hereafter or they may not, but in any case its chief work has been accomplished."

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. Sold by all Druggists.

SELECTIONS.

About George Kennan, the Russian Traveller.

In looking over some old papers, we stumble upon an account written by a Washington correspondent of the Advertiser, relating very interesting particulars of Mr. Kennan, whose articles on Russian prisons published in the Century are so widely read:

What is Mr. Kennan's daily business? Not one person in 1000 in this city could tell, probably. He is, as he has always been, one of the men who turn night into day. Go up into the fourth story of the Corcoran building, between 8 A.M. and 2 A.M., and you will find him sitting among clicking instruments and great piles of "manifold," as the tissue paper on which several copies of any matter for publication is known among the craft. There he is, a slender man with a black moustache, and thin black hair just turning a little to gray, wiry, but with the spirit of energy and intense love of work visible in every feature.

His fine head and his eyes are the striking parts of his face. The bump of perceptiveness over his eyes sticks out until it stares the visitor in the face. His eyes, dark, keen, eager and restless, say when his lips are not moving how quick they have been in watching men and things. The clicking instruments are there of the Associated Press office, where Mr. Kennan has been for nine years. He is one of the bright managers, with the oversight in connection with others of all the news sent to the newspapers of the great news association of the country from the national capital.

But it was the clicking telegraph instrument that first sent George Kennan into the northern wilds of Asia, taught him Russian, and made the study of the country fascinating to him. He entered Siberia in the service of the Western Union Telegraph Company, under 21. His zest for exploration, his interest in the cold land and its people was all the more quickened by the circumstances of his boyhood. Morse's alphabet was in his brain almost before he was more than a baby.

He was only 6 years old when he sent his first message by telegraph. He knew the alphabet of sound, though he was so young he could not read script. His father printed a sentence for him to send and he sent it. He dropped out for school, but came back to the instrument a mere boy, learned the alphabet over again and went to work as an operator. This was in Cincinnati, and there he remained during the war.

So he kept at it. At 18 he was pale, thin, almost a shadow, 120 pounds altogether of him, skin and bones. Then it was that the Western Union plan of an overland system of telegraphic communication to stretch across northern Asia was proposed. It got into the newspapers, hints of it, and again George Kennan wrote to Gen. Steiger for a chance to get outdoors and recuperate.

"Can you get ready to start for Siberia in two weeks?" was the question which came to him over the wires two days after his letter.

"I can get ready in two hours," came back without an instant's delay. But there was a hitch at home. Kennan's parents looked askance at the idea of allowing a boy of 18, who looked almost ready for a sick-bed, to start for another continent. But a sensible old family physician came up. He said that if the boy worked two years longer in a telegraph office he was sure to die. The chances were that if he got out and about he would build up. So he started. A siege of typhoid delayed him six weeks, but when he did get to San Francisco, with the appetite of a sea-voyage and a convalescing young man upon him meantime, he stood 40 pounds heavier, hearty, wide-awake. There was longer delay in the glorious California climate while the ships were loading, and so much more leisure. The tropical scenery of Central America as seen on the journey through Nicaragua, was a revelation. It made him more eager than ever, and he set out westward gladly.

There he remained over two years, working at the preparations for the route. Over 600 miles of the line was blocked up. Stations were laid. This was slow work and expensive. The provisions were costly; the distances were so long. Finally the work was given up. The Atlantic cable was doing better work than was thought possible before. It became clear that the estimates for completing the work were much too small. The total had been placed at $3,000,000. It could not be done for less than $20,000,000. When the order came to discontinue, quite $3,000,000 had been spent. The material brought out was abandoned, and the men returned home. They left behind them insulators and brackets for the poles. The natives were quick to take possession. The brackets served as firewood, and the insulators for drinking cups. The San Francisco man, too, who goes into eastern Siberia within 20 years is very apt to find his grandfather's photograph there. The telegraph planners got a great batch on the plea they never would be seen again. They used them to trade with the natives, and the latter treasure them religiously.

Young Kennan made the trip home the long way, beginning with a grand sleigh-ride on the boulevard leading to St. Petersburg. The road was good and it was a lightning trip with sledges, 3842 miles in 20 odd days. He was a new man, filled with a deep interest in the wild country, able to talk Russian, with a head full of points about the looks, habits and homes of the natives, and some idea of the doings of the Russians. Back across Europe he went, and back to Norwalk, O., home. He had been away from home three years, and travelled 5000 miles. Part of his adventures many a boy has dreamed about, after reading "Tent life in Siberia."

Inhospitable country as he found it, its fascination was stronger. He could not keep away. He has been returning ever since. Four times since he first went to string wires across the steppes, he has entered them on a sledge and in his fur bag. Each time since he has travelled from St. Petersburg east instead of west. Once Mrs. Kennan has been with him, not in the steppes, but in western and civilized Russia.

His last journey was undertaken first at Mr. Kennan's own request, and later at the suggestion of Mr. R. W. Gilder. It took much longer time than was expected, and was if anything more successful than was anticipated. To get all the facts from both sides, the government and the exiles, was the mission of Mr. Kennan and his artist companion. The former was well equipped. His four trips had acquainted him with the country and the Russian character. The government was predisposed in his favor from the fact that what he had written had been in a favorable light. He now wished to investigate further. The point was made that the prisons, etc. had been written about, and probably exaggerated. It would be well to correct some false impressions. Mr. Kennan was allowed to go, but he was told that in each case he must get the consent of the governor of each Siberian province before he could examine his territory. Thus to the government was left power to revoke all privileges, if the hardy traveller ventured too far in his questions.

Circumstances were in his favor. He worked in Eastern Siberia. Here are the milder exiles, those exiled on hidden charges. As the traveller proceeded west were those held to answer for graver offences. Then came the extremes, the convicts and the laborers in the mines. Greater freedom is allowed the milder ones; they can talk with less concealment. They are less closely watched. Then with the advance into the interior came a constant education in methods, until, mastering, bit by bit, as he travelled, both the incidents in recent Russian history, and the capacity to meet both officials and convicts, he was able to gain information even in the recesses of the mines, where, he admits, he might very likely, have failed, had he begun west and worked toward the broad end of the big boulevard.

Mr. Kennan's home is full of novel and picturesque touches. In many of the doors the upper panels have been removed to give way to ground glass photographic views. The library walls are decorated with a collection of Russian swords and pistols, many of over a century in age, silvered, gilded and inlaid with ivory. The workmanship on the handles and barrels is exquisite.

There is one executioner's sword of Damascus steel, the blade having the owner's name cut into the glittering steel. It is one of the most valuable collections in the country, picked up in St. Petersburg by Mr. Kennan as he and his wife were starting for home after the eighteen months it took to get the Century material.

The library shelves are crowded with Russian books, reports, papers, magazines. There are Russian grammars there, but the one which Mr. Kennan, the boy in the employ of the Western Union made for himself 20 years ago, to help kill time in a Siberian winter, has now been published. Tolstoi is there and Miss Hapgood's translation of Russian songs.

Mr. Kennan's workshop is a floor above, one of the quaintest rooms in Washington. The ceilings and walls are draped with furs and Russian stuff, until the interior looks not unlike that of a Kirghese tent. The typewriter is not far from another group of sacros, and in a book-case at one side is a card-catalogue to all the books and papers the author owns. The diaries, manuscripts, note-books, etc., are in a fireproof room away from the house.

Mr. Kennan still has the genius of hard work, and writes by day after working at night, but in a more leisurely manner. He has tested his constitution. There are no doubts that it has iron in it, and in plenty. So he is content to take more rest. But when he talks of Russia his face lights up, and he seems almost as ready for another trip as when he telegraphed Gen. Steiger he would start for Siberia in two hours.

Norman Macleod's Birthday Letter to his Mother.

One of the truest and noblest men that "Auld Scotia" has given to the world in the present century is Dr. Norman Macleod who, though dead, yet speaks through the influence of his life, and of his many spoken and written "Good Words." A good specimen of his irrepressible humor is found in his letter to his aged mother written on his fifty-seventh birthday:

June 3rd, 1868.

"I am quite safe in saying that I have written to you, say forty letters, on my birthday; and whatever was defective as to number in my letters was made up by your love. Now I begin to think the whole affair is getting stale to you. In short, you anticipate all I can say, am likely to say, or ought to say; and having done so, you begin to read and to laugh and to cry time about, and to praise me to all my unfortunate brothers and sisters, until they detest me till June 4th. Don't you feel grateful I was born? Are you not thankful? I know you are, and no wonder. I need not enumerate all those well known personal and domestic virtues which have often called forth your praises, except when you are beaten at backgammon. But there is another side of the question with which I have to do, and that is, whether I ought to be so very grateful to you for the event with which June 3d, 1812, is associated. As I advance in life, this question becomes more interesting to me; and it seems due to the interests of truth and justice to state on this day, when I have had fifty-six years' experience of life in its most varied forms, that I am by no means satisfied with your conduct on that occasion, and that if you fairly consider it, I feel assured you will justify me in demanding from you the only reparation possible—an ample apology, and a solemn promise never to do the like again! You must acknowledge that you took a very great liberty with a man of my character and position, not to ask me whether I was disposed to enter upon a new and important state of existence; whether I should prefer winter or summer to begin the trial; or whether I should be a Scotchman, Irishman, or Englishman; or even whether I should be 'man or woman' born; each of these alternatives involving me to most important consequences. What a good John Bull I would have made! what a rattling, roaring Irishman! what a capital mother or wife! what a jolly abess! But you doomed me to be born in a tenth-rate provincial town, half Scotch, half Highland, and sealed my doom as to sex and country. Was that fair? Would you like me to have done that to you? Suppose through my fault you had been born a wild Spanish papist, what would you have said on your fifty-seventh birthday, with all your Protestant convictions? Not one Maxwell or Duntroon related to you! you yourself a nun called St. Agnese! and all, forsooth, because I had willed that you should be born at Toledo on June 3rd, 1812! Think of it, mother seriously, and say, have you done to me as you would have had me done to you?

"Then again, pray who is to blame for all I have suffered for fifty-six years! Who but you? This reply alone can be made to a thousand questions which press themselves on my memory, until the past seems a 'history of misery endured with angelic patience. Why, I might ask, for example, did I live for weeks on insipid 'lythings,' spending days and nights screaming, weeping, hiccupping, with an old woman swathing and unwathing me, whose nature retired from such attentions? Why had I for years to learn to walk and speak, and amuse aunts and friends like a young parish fool, and wear frocks—fancy me in a frock now, addressing the Assembly! and yet I had to wear them for years! Why have I suffered from mumps, whooping-cough, measles, scarlet fever, toothache, headache, lumbago, gout, sciatica, sore back, sore legs, sore sides, and other ailments; having probably sneezed several thousand times, and coughed as often since christened? Why? Because I was born! because you, and none but you, insisted I should be born!"

Why have I had to be tossed about on every sea and ocean, and kept in perpetual danger from icebergs, fogs, storms, shipwrecks? You did it! Why have I had my mind distracted, my brain worn, my heart broken, my nerves torn, my frame exhausted, my life tortured with preachings and preparations, speeches, lectures, motions, resolutions, programmes; with sessions, presbyteries, and assemblies; with all Churches, bond and free; with all countries from east to west, with good words and bad words; with Sunday questions and week-day questions; with all sorts of people, from Trembling Jock to the Queen; with friends and relations, Jews and Greeks, bond and free? Why all this, and a thousand times more, if not simply and solely because, forsooth, of your conduct on June 3rd, 1812? No wonder it is a solemn and sad day to you! No wonder you sigh, and—unless all good is out of you—weep too. I was told my poor father on the day I was born, hid in a hayrick from sheer anxiety. He had some idea of what he was doing. But, dear soul! he always gave in to you; and it was in vain for either of us to speak. I am told I yelled very loud—I hope I did—I could do no more then; and I can do little more now than protest, as I do, against the whole arrangement.

"An American expressed to a friend of mine a great desire to visit Siam, as he understood its people were all twins! The thought makes me tremble. What if I had been born like the Siamese twins! Think of my twin brother and myself going as a deputy to India; in the same berth, speaking together at the same meeting, sick together at sea, or both suffering from gout, and you concerned and anxious about your poor boys! What, supposing my twin had married Mrs.—?"

"Mother dear, repent!"

A Story for the Boys.

The July Wide Awake publishes what a lawyer called "the best boy's story he ever heard." Although his name is the same, it must not be supposed that this boy is identical with Frank Jones, the great millionaire of New Hampshire—we cannot think what text the latter Frank could have for his motto:

"We have had a good many boys with us from time to time," said Mr. Alden, the senior member of a large hardware establishment in Market street, Philadelphia, "as apprentices, to learn the business. What may surprise you is that we never take country boys, unless they live in the city with some relative who takes care of them and keeps them home at night, for when a country boy comes to the city to live everything is new to him, and he is attracted by every show window and unusual sight. The city boy who is accustomed to these things cares little for them, and if he has a good mother he is at home and in bed in due season. And we are very particular about our boys—and before accepting one as an apprentice we must know that he comes of honest and industrious parents."

"But the best boy we ever had is with us, and a member of the firm. He is the one man in the establishment that we couldn't do without. He was thirteen years old when he was apprenticed to us, and he was with us for eleven years, acting for seven years as salesman. When he first came we told him that for a long time his wages would be very small, but that if he proved to be a good boy his salary would be increased at a certain rate every year, and as it turned out, when according to agreement we should have been paying him five hundred dollars a year, we paid him nine hundred, and he never said a word himself about an increase of salary. From the very outset, he showed that he had an interest in the business. He was prompt in the morning and if kept a little over time at night, it never seemed to make any difference with him. He gradually came to know where everything was to be found, and if information was wanted, it was to this boy, Frank Jones, that every one applied. The entire establishment seemed to be mapped out in his head and everything in it catalogued and numbered. His memory of faces was equally remarkable. He knew the name of every man who came to the store to buy goods, what he bought and where he came from. I often used to say to him 'Jones, your memory is worth more than a gold mine. How do you manage to remember?'

"I make it my business to remember," he would say. "I know that if I can remember a man and call him by name when he comes to the store, and can ask him how things are going on where he lives, I will be very likely to keep him as a customer."

"And that was the exact case. He made friends of buyers. He took the same interest in their purchases as he took in the store, and would go to no end of trouble to suit them, and to fulfill to the letter everything he promised."

"Well, affairs went on in this way until he had been with us eleven years. When we concluded to take him into the firm as a partner. We knew that he had no extravagant habits, that he neither used tobacco, nor beer, nor went to the theater. He continued as at the beginning to board at home, and even when his salary was the very lowest he paid his mother two dollars a week for his board. He was always neatly dressed, and we thought it was very probable that he had laid up one or two thousand dollars, as his salary for the last two years had been twelve hundred dollars. So when we made him the offer to become a partner in the business, and suggested that it would be more satisfactory if he could put some money into the firm, he replied:

"If ten thousand dollars will be any object I can put in that much. I have saved out of my salary nine thousand four hundred dollars, and my sister will let me have six hundred."

"I can tell you that I was never more astonished in my life, than when that fellow said he could put in ten thousand dollars, and the most of it his own money. He had never spent a dollar, or twenty-five cents or five cents for an unnecessary thing, and he had kept his money in the bank where it gathered a small interest. I am a great believer in the Bible, you know, and I always kept two placards in big letters up in the store. On one was this text: 'He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in that which is much'; and on the other: 'He that is diligent in business, shall stand before kings and not before mean men.' And Frank Jones' success was the literal fulfillment of those two texts. He had been faithful in the smallest things as in the greater ones, and diligent in business. That kind of a boy always succeeds," concluded Mr. Alden.

A Fellow's Mother.

"A fellow's mother," said Fred the wise, With his rosy cheeks and his merry eyes, 'Knows what to do if a fellow gets hurt By a thump or a bruise or a fall in the dirt."

"A fellow's mother has bags and strings, Bags and buttons and lots of things; No matter how busy she is, she'll stop To see how well you can spin your top."

"She does not care, not much, I mean, If a fellow's face is not always clean; And if your trousers are worn at the knee She can put in a patch that you'd never see."

"A fellow's mother is never mad, But only sorry if you are bad; And I'll tell you this, if you're only true She'll always forgive what'er you do."

"I'm sure of this," said Fred the wise, With a manly look in his laughing eyes; "I'll mind my mother, quick, every day, A fellow's a baby that don't obey."

The South church congregation listened to a very forcible and earnest sermon by Rev. Geo. H. Guttererson on consecration to Christ, the ideal life, based upon words found in 2 Cor. 5:15—"Not unto themselves, but unto Him."

Rev. Frederic Palmer preached at Christ church on the importance of ambition, and the importance that it should be high enough. His text was 1 Cor. 12:31, "Covet earnestly the best Gifts."

Rev. J. V. Stratton preached at the Baptist church in the morning from Ps. 25:14, and his address in the evening was on "A genuine Hope."

Prof. Ryder again occupied the Free church pulpit, his morning discourse being taken from Romans 12: 2. In the evening his sermon showed that God is working in all the events of life, not simply in the great things, but his care and laws extend to the most minute things. The text was found in Ps. 31: 15, "My times are in thy hand."

Rev. Father Fahy of Philadelphia preached the sermon at the Catholic on "The Gospel of the Day," Matt. 7: 15-31.

At the West church, "Indebtedness" formed the subject of Rev. Mr. Greene's discourse, found in the text Prov. 3: 27, "Withhold not good from them to whom it is due, when it is in the power of thine hand to do it."

Rev. Lysander Dickerman of Boston, the well-known lecturer on Egypt, occupied the Chapel desk, and spoke on the subject, "The Pharaohs of Egypt."

The Congregationalist says of Mr. Savage who preached at the South church two Sundays ago: "Rev. J. W. Savage, who is called to a new work at Red Jacket, leaves a good record at Lake Linden. He began work there five years ago with only sixteen members, but they reached self-support the first year, and 100 others have been added, seventy-three on confession. A fine house of worship has been built, costing about $12,000, and is nearly paid for. The benevolent contributions have ranged from $375 to $565 annually."

A wonderful miracle is reported to have occurred in Lowell last Friday at St. Joseph's Catholic church, where the feast of St. Anne was being observed. Frank Paris was stricken with paralysis two years ago. Since then he has been unable to move either his left arm or leg and has carried a cane. He has been a devoted attendant at the novena held at St. Joseph's, and for nine successive days prayed fervently to St. Anne to be relieved of his malady. After receiving the blessed sacrament yesterday, he placed his cane inside the altar railings, and to the surprise of the immense throng walked without aid to the last pew of the edifice. Thousands of people visited the church to view the cane. Mr. Paris confirms the foregoing statement and ascribes his cure to St. Anne. He can now walk, although his limbs are a trifle stiff.

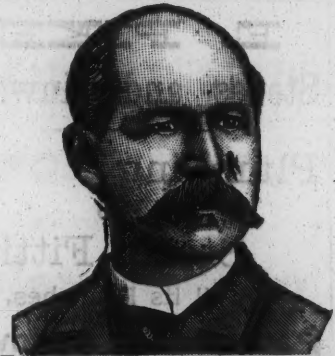

The sixth annual Bible Conference at Crescent Beach will be held Aug. 13, 14, 15, 16, 18. There will be several well known speakers, among them L. W. Munhall, Russell Sturgis, Esq., Rev. A. T. Pierson of Philadelphia and others.

Andover Benevolence for Lawrence Hospital.

Andover people have always shown considerable interest in the Lawrence City Hospital in the way of various donations and on the other side have derived a good deal of benefit from its use. In this way a bond of friendship has sprung up between the Ladies' Union Charitable Society and these people for the welfare of the above institution. This bond is now united much closer by the very generous offer the past week of Miss Helen C. Bradlee of Boston, but who is counted as one of the Andover people. For some time it has been known that the present Hospital is too small for the requirements and now there seems to be the chance of a new hospital in the very near future. Mrs. Chas. U. Dunning, chairman of the L.U.C.S., received a request last week from Miss Bradlee to call upon her, which was done last Tuesday. In course of conversation Miss Bradlee spoke of her interest in the Hospital and of the need of larger quarters. She gave to Mrs. Dunning a check for $10,000 to be used for that purpose. The work of construction is not to be commenced until $40,000 or $50,000 has been secured, but it is proposed, however, to purchase at once a site for a building, which is in accordance with the wishes of Miss Bradlee. This lady has already made gifts to this Hospital amounting to $4400, besides unbounded charity for other objects. The people of Andover and Lawrence have reason to feel proud of such a noble woman.
